The Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

MARSHALL'S MEMORY

For a long time, Jim Farley and Mrs. Henry Wallace were supposed to have the best memories around Washington. But they have a real rival in the chief of staff, General Marshall.

Returning from a warfront town, Marshall held a press conference. Twenty-one newsmen were present. Marshall said he would answer one question from each newsmen.

He turned to the man nearest him on the right and said, "All right, what's yours?"

The question proved to be rather elaborate. "I will answer that in a minute," said Marshall. "But let's go ahead. What's yours?"

And before answering any questions, he went the rounds of 21 men and got their 21 questions. Then he proceeded to answer the questions one by one.

Not only did he remember the question which each of the twenty-one had asked, but he remembered who asked it. Pointing to each man, he said, "Now your question was—?" And then he named it and proceeded to answer it.

This was more than a feat of memory. It gave order and body to the answers, and eliminated the confusion of most press conferences.

Note: Other competitors for the "Memory Club" are Nat Howard of the Cleveland News, formerly U. S. press censor; and Erwin A. Holt of Burlington, N. C., who can tell you the day of the week you were born on if you give him the date.

CAPITAL CHAFF

John D. M. Hamilton is getting around $25,000 a year and expenses from Joe Pew, in part for his work against Willkie. How things change! Four years ago Pew was the man who helped select Willkie.

Adm. Adolphus Andrews, recently retired from the Eastern Defense command, has been offered $100,000 a year by an unnamed commercial outfit.

Ann Corio, the strip tease artist, was turned down by the Red Cross when she applied for overseas duty with the "distress corps" because she was not a college graduate.

The war department has sent instructions to all motorized units to get along with their present tires. Just one indication of how tight tires are going to be.

The Poles are burned up by what happened at Moscow.

CONGRESS DOWN ON DOCTORS

Despite the dangerous shortage of doctors and dentists, the house appropriations committee slashed a $1,000,000 request by the U. S. Public Health service from the supplemental defense bill.

However, what most observers missed was the fact that this same committee less than six months ago disapproved a $175,000 request for medical relief on the ground that the request should have been bigger!

The $1,000,000 fund was to enable the relocation of 600 doctors and dentists in areas where they are desperately needed, and was vetoed despite warnings by War Manpower's Dr. Frank H. Lahey, the American Medical association, the American Dental association, and the war and navy departments that in some areas there was only one physician to every 3,000 civilians.

But the committee butchered the $1,000,000 just the same.

In contrast, here is how the same committee ruled last May on a $175,000 request for relocating 70 physicians:

"The committee is well aware that the shortage of physicians in many sections of the country is acute, but considers that any program which would provide for the services of only 70 physicians is so ineffective as to be unjustifiable."

"The committee is willing to give consideration to any type of program which the Public Health service may suggest to meet the need in a more adequate manner."

UNCLE SHYLOCK?

Hottest question at the Atlantic City relief conference: Who pays the relief bill?

There is no dispute about the quality of mercy, but some think it blesses him that takes more than him that gives. In short, most of the foreign delegates are willing to pledge products of all kinds from their countries, for relief of the oppressed peoples of Europe, provided those products may be sold, not given away.

But the United States thinks there should be some bountiful giving, as a pump-priming operation to get the war-torn countries back into production.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

In 1935, before Mussolini invaded Ethiopia, he practically denuded Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas of mules. The Italian government bought about 300,000.

Inside reason for withdrawal of Dominican Ambassador J. M. Troncoso from Washington is that Dominican dictator Trujillo is displeased at not being invited to visit the White House. Most other Latin presidents have been invited, but FDR sticks to Sumner Welles' ban against Trujillo.

Castor Beans Furnish Base for Insecticide

U. S. Can Grow Needed Poisons, Say Chemists

For a number of years the United States has been importing many millions of pounds of insecticides and the bases for insecticides from foreign sources, many of which are now cut off by the war. J. Edmund Good, vice president of a chemical company, told members of the Mid-American Chemurgic conference and the National Farm Chemurgic council at their joint convention in Cincinnati, recently.

Raw materials for the larger part of our food insecticide needs today can be grown right on the nation's farms, he continued. Probably 90 per cent of those importations upon which we formerly depended can be replaced with products from our own American farms. There is a direct connection between an adequate domestic supply of insecticides and our domestic crop of castor beans which was recently begun.

A newly developed insecticide, commercially called "Spra Kast," is derived from the castor bean plant, including the stems and leaves. Because of the many uses for castor oil in vital war products, there has not been sufficient quantities of castor plants available to manufacture any important quantity of the new spray, Mr. Good said. This situation may improve, he went on, if dehydrated castor bean leaves can be obtained. We know that we will have to have very large tonnages of materials to meet 1944's demands for the finished product.

For example, one of the large citrus growers in Florida had a crop this year that was much greater and of better quality than last year, and was still better than the previous year's crop. This is the first year that he used the new insecticide exclusively.

Somehow similar results were obtained with potatoes in Maine. Two or three years ago when we began experimenting with the spraying of vegetables, we watched those experiments very closely. The results obtained in the years 1942 and 1943 satisfy us that the spray will adequately protect vegetables from the insects that infest them, and will produce a better quality of vegetables. And remember, Mr. Good emphasized, that no imported materials need be used if castor beans were grown in this country in quantity.

All the possibilities of the new insecticide have not been explored and experimental work is going on continually. For instance, it has been combined with sulphur or copper and used in commercial applications for control of red spider, purple mite, six-spotted mite, rust mite, melanose and many soft-bodied worms that infest vegetables.

It is not claimed that this insecticide will kill all insects. In some cases it seems to act as a repellent; in other cases as a contact poison on sucking insects such as aphids, thrips, lice, mealy bugs, leafhoppers, and red bugs; and controls chewing insects such as beetles, leaf rollers and caterpillars. A few of the many crop insects that have been reported to us as being controlled are:

- Beans: Mexican bean beetles, aphids, leaf rollers.
- Beets: Flea beetles, worms.
- Cabbage: Imported cabbage worms, cabbage loopers.
- Cucumbers: Melon aphids, melon worms, beetles.
- Potatoes: Aphids, beetles, leaf hoppers, leaf rollers and flea beetles.
- Spinach: Flea beetles, aphids, cabbage loopers, worms.
- Tomatoes: Fruit worms, flea beetles.
- Lettuce: Worms.
- Peas: Aphids, weevils.

The purpose in mentioning these details and properties is not to emphasize one insecticide particularly, Mr. Good said in closing, but to point out that an efficient insecticide can be made from farm crops grown in the United States for the United States.

DOAN'S PILLS

BLACK SOMBREIRO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is cut off from the will of her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine. Hunt Rogers, professional sleuth, and Barry Madison, an amateur detective, go to Mazatlan, Mexico, to solve what they believe to be Kitty Chatfield's murder. On arrival they find that Elsa's party had preceded them by plane. During a festa at Sam Chatfield's ranch (Sam is Elsa's father) Rogers questions the guests about the death of Sam's sister. All have a motive. They go to the courtyard and while watching the dancing Maria announces the death of James Chesebro. The Mexican police arrive and examine the body. Death was the result of a knife thrust.

CHAPTER X

"Why, then, did the others push you forward as if you knew something?"

"I go over the house seeking my pay; they do not have the money in the kitchen, sir. It is for this reason they push me forward."

"So you were wandering about the house, then?" said Lombardo.

"What did you see?"

"I am walking in a place, sir, which Maria tells me is the passage-way that leads to the room where the gentleman was murdered. There I see a man enter a door, sir, which must be the door to the room. For I have described it well to Maria, sir."

"Who was the man, Pedro?"

"That I do not know, sir."

"Was he wearing a sombrero?"

"Yes, sir."

"What kind?"

"It was large and black. I think it was of felt. The head and shoulders were in shadows, sir, but in the hand he carried a whip."

"Was he Mexican or American, Pedro?"

"Sir, I do not know."

"What kind of a whip did he have? You said he carried a whip."

"It was about so long, sir," and Pedro's thin brown hands measured a space in air about eighteen inches in length. "It was, I think, what you call a quirt, sir."

"A quirt, so?" Lombardo turned to look meaningfully at Alvarez, his eyebrows arched, his lips parted slightly. He turned back to the pulque man. "Do you see among us, Pedro, such a man as you have described? I warn you to be very careful; these are gentlemen."

Pedro's sharp little eyes, to my alarm, were suddenly upon me; he inspected me carefully, then shifted to Sam Chatfield who sat beside me. Finally he quitted our host's short figure and moved to Huntoon Rogers. He dismissed him with a glance, then came back to me, as if some doubt lingered in his mind.

"I did not see the face, sir," Pedro reminded Lombardo.

Huntoon Rogers spoke for the first time. "It is impossible, Senor Lombardo. Senor Madison was with me when Maria came with the news of the murder."

"And all of the evening, senor?" I answered the question. "No," I said. "But the remainder of the time I was with either Senor Rumble, or Senorita Chatfield."

"Yes, of course," said Lombardo. "Pedro is wrong." He waved the pulque man away abruptly, saying sternly, "It is enough, Pedro; you are mistaken about this man." He pointed to me. "Do not make any more mistakes."

"Yes, sir," replied Pedro, springing up from the chair and vanishing in the shadows near the door.

"The quirt," Lombardo said, "I do not understand. Was it the purpose to whip the victim and then kill him? The lashes on the face, Miguel, were they made so recently?" he turned to Doctor Cruz.

"They were made much earlier, Otilio."

"How did he get them? Did the one who gave them to him return, and this time kill him with a knife?"

No one answered the questions. "Is there anyone else among the servants whom you wish to interrogate?" inquired our host.

"No, sir, I am interested now in other things."

"Come this way, then," said Sam Chatfield, leading us from the kitchen.

An atmosphere of gloom seemed to pervade the huge living room when we entered. Margaret and Dwight Nichols sat with Berta, talking quietly. Elsa and Reed Barton had withdrawn to a shadowy corner. George Rumble sat on the bench of the grand piano smoking.

"I think," began Sam Chatfield hesitantly, "that Senor Lombardo has a few questions to ask."

"Only a very few, ladies and gentlemen," Lombardo said, bowing courteously.

"The Senorita," and his eyes sought out Elsa in the background, "if I may, please; I wish to ask of her a question."

Elsa moved forward, still wearing the colorful costume in which she had danced with Reed Barton, and stood before Lombardo.

"A thousand pardons, senorita," began Lombardo, yielding to an obvious embarrassment that swept over him. "I ask the question: Have you worn the costume of the China Poblana all evening?"

"Yes, of course," Elsa replied, somewhat puzzled. "I put it on at dusk."

"Then you cannot be the one," said Lombardo.

George Rumble got up from his seat on the piano bench. He walked over to Lombardo.

"Elsa is out of it; you can't tangle her in this thing. And all I want to say is what about a sombrero? I notice mine is missing from the rack near the front door. I don't accuse anybody of stealing it, you understand; but what about a sombrero?"

Lombardo turned to Alvarez and said in Spanish, "Fetch the sombrero from the room, please." He turned back to Rumble. "In a moment, Senor Rumble, I will show you the sombrero I speak of." Alvarez returned promptly with the black felt sombrero.

"Do you recognize the sombrero, senor?" Lombardo inquired, holding it out to Rumble.

"Sure. It's my hat. A while ago when I was out that way I missed it." Rogers answered. "We found it in the room where Chesebro was murdered."

A curious expression came over Rumble's face; the dark eyes seemed to grow darker.

As he stood there before us the chief of police conceived an idea; it was first observable in a narrowing of his large dark eyes, a cocking

"But what do you know about the death of the gentleman in the big room?"

of his round head. He summoned Alvarez with a lift of his chin and said in Spanish, "The pulque man who is called Pedro; bring him here at once, Luis," and he indicated a spot on the floor directly in front of him with a down turned thumb as the place to which he desired the pulque man to be brought.

Alvarez vanished and the occupants of the room relaxed. Cigarettes were passed and a nervous attempt at light conversation was made by Berta while we waited for the return of the pulque man. She was smiling and almost gay, although in the depths of her dark eyes there was a look of fear. We had not long to wait, however, for Alvarez soon returned, clutching the frightened Pedro by a thin arm.

"It is lucky for you, Pedro, that you are still here," began Lombardo. "I have more questions to ask you."

"I am here, sir," replied the man, "because I have not yet received the money for my pulque."

Lombardo ignored the frank statement, and requested the man to look about him. "Here are other persons, Pedro," he directed. "Look closely, and tell me if any of these others is the man you saw wearing the sombrero and carrying the whip. Make no mistakes."

Pedro did as he was bidden, but shyly and with evident embarrassment. Dwight Nichols stood up the better to be viewed, and he pulled George Rumble by the sleeve to line him up alongside himself and Reed Barton.

"I see only the back, sir; I do not see the face," he repeated.

Lombardo was patient. He picked up Rumble's black sombrero from a chair where it rested and held it out to Pedro. "Is this the sombrero the man wore?" he asked.

Pedro put his hands behind him and shook his head. "I saw only the back, sir," he repeated monotonously.

Lombardo had an idea. "We will go to the place where you saw the man, Pedro," he announced. "The gentlemen in turn will put on the sombrero, and carry the whip, and you will say which, if any, looks like the man you saw. Where is the whip?"

"There's a whip there on the table under my hat," Elsa remarked casually. "One I've carried with me riding." She indicated a table against the wall near the door. Alvarez went to the table and brought back a quirt I recognized as the one Elsa had used that morning in her savage attack upon Chesebro. Lombardo took it.

"Yours?" he asked, gesturing toward Elsa.

"No; not mine. It belongs here on the rancho. I found it, when I wanted a whip, on the rack outside where the hats hang."

"Ah, so?" Lombardo turned the quirt about in his hands, examining it. It interested Lombardo who studied it for a moment. Finally and without releasing his hold he held it out toward Pedro. "Is this the whip you saw, Pedro?"

The pulque man took one quick, fascinated glance, then looked away. "I do not know, sir; there was a whip in the hand."

"Come; the gentlemen, please; the ladies, no. Follow me." Lombardo spoke quickly. He led the way toward the sombrero room where the body of Chesebro still lay in its huge mound within the dim pool of candlelight.

"Where were you when you saw the man enter the room?" Lombardo demanded.

"I am here, sir," he answered, pointing with a trembling finger to a tall piece of furniture against the wall. "I hear the man coming, and I feel I have trespassed where I should not go. So I conceal myself there and wait for him to pass."

"Very well, Pedro; you stand there now, and one of the gentlemen will put on the sombrero and carry the whip and walk past you."

"I did not see the face, sir; I see only the back," the pulque man reminded him as he took his station.

"Now, which of you will be the first?" Lombardo asked, ignoring the man's remark.

Reed Barton stepped forward, still dressed in the costume of the Charro, except for his own sombrero which he had left among the others on the rack near the front door.

"Ah, so? Thank you, sir," Lombardo gave him Rumble's hat, which Reed set atop his head, greatly increasing the height of his tall figure.

"Now the whip," said Lombardo, and that was given him. "And now, Pedro, the gentleman comes from this direction and walks to the door, opens it and enters, is it not so?"

"Yes, sir."

Reed withdrew and began a slow but steady walk down the dim passageway to the door behind which lay the body of the murdered man. I drew back against the wall beside Rogers, whose body was crowded close against mine. I felt a tenseness in his muscles and realized with what extraordinary alertness his eyes followed the tall figure of Reed Barton as he re-enacted the dread prologue to the death of Chesebro. Slowly, inevitably, he approached the door to the room. Rogers had become so intent upon this re-enactment that he was drawn a few steps after him, studying the figure, his every action and movement. As Reed touched the door-knob, when we all were intent upon this last act before we should turn to demand of the pulque man his verdict, there was a sudden rustling sound behind us. It was followed by a rapid shuffle of feet in loose guaraches, and before our astonished gaze as we turned, Pedro, the pulque man, was running away as fast as his thin legs could carry him.

Nor did we find him later that night after the police had taken their departure, their questions exhausted, their plan of re-enactment of the murder scene abruptly ended by the departure of Pedro, although, directed by Sam Chatfield, we searched diligently. There was an old moon. The others at last had scattered. Only Huntoon Rogers and I lingered in the patio.

"What do you make of it, Hunt?" I inquired, meaning the night's tragic happening and the comic opera exit of the star witness. He was slow to reply. At last he said:

"Did you see the whip at any time during Reed's walk down the dim passageway? He carried it in his hand, you know."

"I saw him take the whip."

"But did you see it in his hand as he walked?"

"No."

"Does that not strike you as interesting?"

"It means much, I think; it explains what has happened. In the kitchen when Pedro described the appearance of Chesebro's murderer, he put the whip in his hand. Pedro took his stand at the spot where he says he observed the death march, so to speak. But the whip is not visible carried quietly at the side."

"Therefore, Barry, it is simple to reason that Pedro either lied when he said the man carried a whip, or he saw him elsewhere in the house at a time and place where the whip was plainly visible."

We sat together in the patio turning over the possibilities that lay close to the fact, the corollaries that might flow from it. Did Pedro, therefore, also hold the secret of that other murder far to the north of us in California and distant now in time by more than a year? Finally, I said what was in my thoughts.

"Reed Barton?"

Huntoon Rogers did not reply at once. He leaned forward on the bench, his hands upon his knees, staring into the shadows at our feet.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's.—Exodus 20:17.

The Ten Commandments (the last one of which we study today) are characterized by their brevity, their comprehensive touch with all of life, and fidelity to the right. But they are also unique and different from all other laws in that they reach into the inner recesses of a man's heart, a realm where only God can judge and act.

This last commandment (against covetousness) emphasizes that point. For it does not expressly require or forbid any act, but deals with the motive of man's action. Man can judge another man's acts, but he cannot judge his motives, desires, or thoughts. God must do that.

But man can, by the grace of God control his motives; and hence we have this commandment and its interpretation.

I. The Sin—Covetousness (Ex 20:17).

It may be a surprise to many to learn that coveting—or desiring what belongs to another—is a sin. It has become one of the "respectable sins" accepted in the best circles and practiced by many church people.

As a matter of fact, this sin underlies all the other sins against which the commandments speak. He who has a love for money and an evil desire to have his neighbor's possessions will hate, lie, steal, cheat, kill, in fact, as Dr. Morgan says, "The whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment."

If you have become a lover of money, or one who longs to have what your friends own, beware. You are in real danger.

II. The Result—A Ruined Life (Luke 12:13-21).

To have such a spirit makes a man greedy (v. 13), callous and selfish (vv. 17-19), and foolish (v. 20), both regarding this life and that which is to come.

The yardstick of success in the world—for an individual, an organization, or a nation; yes, even for many a church—is the possession of wealth, or property, or other "things." Write it in large letters on the hearts and minds of our boys and girls, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15).

The one who was known to his friends (and to himself) as "a rich man" (v. 16), but whom God knew as a "fool" (v. 20), had more than he could use for himself. He had to build new and bigger barns, and could not see the "barns" that were already prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou hast barns—the bosoms of the needy, the houses of widows, the mouths of orphans and infants."

He was a fool who loved money for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

An important point which we must note is that Jesus expressly repudiated the connecting of His name with the so-called "social gospel" in His reply (v. 14).

III. The Cure—Trust in God (Luke 12:22-25).

Because covetousness destroys the best in life, we ought to shun it like poison. The best antidote (or cure) if we have been poisoned by it is to go all-out in our trust and confidence in God.

We who are children of God are to take no anxious thought for the morrow. This does not forbid proper preparation and forethought, but it does rule out fretful anxiety. The reasons are very clear and cogent.

First of all, while food and clothing are important, they are not of first importance. The vital thing is that one have life. Otherwise things are useless (v. 23). We must keep our sense of proportion, of relative values.

Then too, God is the One who must care for every one of us. And He does care for us! Why not trust Him? He cares for all creation can He not care for you? If then you trust the all-powerful One, who occasion is there for worry, or covetousness?

And finally comes the devastating argument. Worry never accomplished anything. Anxiety does not help anyone, anytime, anywhere. So why be anxious?

It is clear then that a desire for that which belongs to others is a sin which destroys man's happiness and usefulness. It is needless—a is all anxiety—because only God can provide, and He will provide if we trust Him.

Life becomes simple, pleasant, useful, confident, yes, really Christian when we get our eyes off things and on the Lord.

Brazilian Farmers Lasso, Slay Gators With Axes

Lassoing crocodiles is the astonishing pastime of farmers of Marajo, an island in the mouth of the Amazon river, Brazil. Because the beasts menace livestock, the farmers engage in a seasonal "crocodile battle," when the creatures are trapped and shot.

Shooting does not assure their death, however, so after the "sport" is over, the farmers lasso them, pull them ashore, and kill them with axes.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Group riding is a rubber-saving procedure which is rapidly gaining acceptance. The average number of persons per car throughout the country prior to July 1, 1942, was 2. In six months it jumped to 2.44, and at the beginning of May it had increased to 2.66. The greatest gain has been in rural industrial areas, where the average is now 3.17 persons per car.

Bottled air may be a regular accessory in the postwar automobile, making the car owner independent of roadside stations when emergency tire inflation is necessary. The air bottles, now used by the Army, can be refilled at any air line.

Dear Friends:

Must take time out and thank you for the cigarettes and to tell you that I am still getting the Tinley Park Times. It gets here a little late but it is always good to get a home town paper. We sure are having a lot of rain out here now and the nights are sure getting cold. Well I am still some place in North Africa. But do not know how long we will be here. There is not much more to write about. So must close for this time.

So long everyone and may God bless each and every one of you. Yours,

Pfc. Walter W. Diekmann, 3634-6868, APO 512 care postmaster New York.

Dear Friends:

I have missed the last few issues of the Tinley Park Times. The local news is important, I would appreciate it very much if you would change the records to my, newest address.

All of the services and gifts of your committee are welcomed by the fellows in service. I for one will gladly sponsor the Navy "E" for the folks back home. They are all 4.0 with me. Many thanks for all you have done. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

Lt. (j. g.) E. J. Ryan, USNR, care Fleet Post office, New Orleans La.

Oct. 26, 1943

Dear Friends:

Have been receiving your generous offer of the Tinley Times right along and thank you one and all. As for my address it has been changed again. Seeing we are talking about addresses I would like to know Pfc. Samuel Grecos full address because I might be able to run across him down here.

Being home last Feb. was quite a reaction for me and seeing all my old friends. The best part of them in the service now. I was just wondering if my stories had anything to do with it. If so I'm sorry. Hope you fellows can take a joke.

Because of the restrictions we have on our letter I must close for now!

Sincerely yours,

Pvt. Wm. E. Burleson, USMC care Fleet Post office, San Francisco, Cal.

Oct. 27, 1913

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know I received your cigarettes and appreciated them very much.

Thanks a lot everyone. How is everyone in Tinley. Fine I hope. Things are going pretty fair down here. We get to see a show about 2 or 3 times a week now and it sure is swell.

Today is my birthday and I am 24 years old. Getting to be an old man and don't know it.

We had a ball game down here Saturday morning and won our first game. We won 8 to 7 and we beat a team that hadn't been beat before, and were beaten every game till then. We also had a American football game in town Sunday, the Australian people get quite a kick out of our all American game.

They think the fellows are crazy. But if you seen the way they play football you would wonder who was crazy. Will close for now.

Thanks for everything loads of luck.

Sincerely,

Sgt. John A. Lehmann, 36204512 APO 926, care postmaster. San Francisco, Cal.

Nov. 21, 1943

Dear Folks:

Well, here's a grand day. I received a swell surprise yesterday. As I was working Saturday afternoon I received a phone call. I said "Hello" and someone said, Is this Mangun? and I said yes. He said, "Well this is Strasberg". And I said Roger Strasberg! And so it was—Then he came out to see me in about an hour, with another Air Corps Lieutenant and we made sort of a party out of it and talked and talked. Ha Ha! Sure was glad to see someone from home.

I took him around on a motorcycle and after all the flying he has been doing I made his hair stand on end. We went over to some people's home and Roger played the piano and I the harmonica and we had a swell time. Then he left for a 7 day furlough and he said he hoped he could stop on his way back. 10,000 miles from home and meet a relative sure is a thrill.

The weather here is rainy and I will take it easy today. Hope it isn't too long before we can all come home.

Love to all.

Bill

Why you are asked to Conserve Electricity

Since there is no shortage of electricity, you may wonder why you are asked to conserve it.

The answer is that there is a need to conserve fuel, railroad facilities, manpower and certain materials used to supply electricity. Conservation of electricity means a saving of these critical resources.

Read the story below and you'll understand where shortages exist and how you can help ease them to promote the war effort and speed the victory we are all striving for.

Cool—is a vital necessity for producing the arms and equipment our men need on the fighting fronts throughout the world. Coal is also a first necessity in producing electricity. By conserving electricity you conserve coal for war production.

Transportation—The nation's transportation system is heavily burdened in moving war supplies and troops. These same transportation facilities must also bring coal to our power plants. By conserving electricity you help ease the strain on transportation.

Manpower—The need for men in the armed forces has created a shortage of manpower. Conservation of electricity in commercial and industrial establishments and in the home, helps to conserve manpower for the producing and transporting of coal.

Critical materials—Every electric light bulb uses tungsten for a filament. Tungsten is also needed in great quantities for radio tubes, Radar and other equipment. By using fewer electric bulbs and using them conservatively, you help our men get more of the weapons they need.

Here's where you can help conserve electricity

Indoor and outdoor advertising, promotional and display sign lighting

Decorative and ornamental lighting, including decorative flood lighting

Show window lighting which does not provide essential interior illumination

Marquee and building entrance lighting (other than advertising signs)

Lighting of outdoor business establishments

General interior illumination and show case lighting

Lighting in the home and use of electric appliances

Ask at any of our offices for a free booklet giving the detailed suggestions of the War Production Board as to how the above uses of electricity may be reduced.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

Mokena News Bulletin

Dear Sir:

I wish to thank you for making it possible for me to keep up with events in the hometown. It is a fine gesture on your part and I, like all the boys in the Service, enjoy reading your paper.

Almost four and a half months have passed since I joined the Navy, and I can truthfully say I've enjoyed every minute of my life in the WAVES. I do hope that my small share in this big job will help to bring our boys home as soon as possible. After all, that is what we all want.

I spent one month in boot training camp at Hunter College, New York. Ask anyone who has gone thru that stage, and you'll know what kind of experience it is! Then I went to Yeoman school for three months at Oklahoma A&M College and it was wonderful to go back to school again. Now here I am working in the Navy Building in Washington, D.C.

A lot of jokes you hear about this place are true though some are slightly exaggerated. My biggest trouble is to keep myself uncircled in the circling streets. Thanks again for sending the paper.

THE bowl situation is in something of a haze or a daze. We have received a number of communications from bowl centers, asking advice as to the teams that might be used. This is quite an order. Southern California seems to be well set in regard to the Rose Bowl, with Washington or College of the Pacific as probable or possible invaders.

Grantland Rice

But what about the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, the Cotton Bowl at Dallas or the Orange Bowl at Miami?

For example, the Cotton Bowl has Texas and Texas A. and M. as the two home defenders.

But where is there an opponent they can pick?

There is Tulsa, with one of the best teams available, but Tulsa is somewhat close to Texas territory.

Tulsa would be better for the Sugar Bowl or the Orange Bowl.

But this leaves the leading Texas team in a spot.

Texas has her part of the Bowl situation all arranged, but locating a first-class competitor from another territory is another matter.

Possibly one good choice could be Southwestern Institute from Louisiana.

The Other Bowls

What about the Sugar Bowl, where they have some 72,000 palpitating spectators waiting for the annual New Year's party?

The New Orleans choice could be L.S.U., Tulane or Southwestern Institute.

These are all good teams.

But what about the opposition? What team can be drawn in that will give the game some semblance of intersectional competition?

The Sugar Bowl would like to get some team from the North or East.

This is not as simple as it used to be. There are few teams from the North or East who have any interest in Bowl games.

And there is also the matter of travel and the distance a team has to travel.

Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Penn State would be worth looking in any Bowl contest.

But no one can say they will be able to meet any Bowl invitation.

The same shadow hangs over the Orange Bowl at Miami.

The best teams from the Southeastern sector include Duke, North Carolina and Georgia Tech.

It is possible that one of these teams might be available. But what opponent can they get from some outlying precinct, to give the game an intersectional flavor?

It is the intersectional angle that has the Bowl promoters a trifle dizzy.

Two-Year-Old Scramble

The hardest discovering job this season has been to locate a racing two-year-old that could wear that rare jewel known as consistency.

The fact that we have no Count Fleets, Whirlaways, Alsabs, or Johnstons in the two-year-old division is no sign, however, that any three-year-old dip will follow.

Some of our greatest mature thoroughbreds were unheralded as two-year-olds.

For one example, there was Sun Beau, champion money maker a few years back, who was unknown at two.

There was Seabiscuit who was still in claiming races at three.

At the age of two Exterminator had won only two ordinary races in the West. Cavalcade was no two-year-old sensation, and neither was Zev.

Man o' War was. But many had to wait until later on to prove their class.

This season the two-year-old division has found many who were evenly matched.

They were good enough and close enough to wear each other or one another down. Their times often were quite fast. This could easily lead to the most interesting three-year-old season for 1944 that any year has known for some time.

If you had to nominate the leading two-year-old for 1943 with the season slipping away in a hurry, the pick would have to be Occup, winner of two big Futurities.

Yet Occup has also finished last. The consensus from leading trainers as to the best prospect, looking to next year, goes to Greentree Stable's Pukka Gin.

An Amazing Season

The racing season in the north for 1943 is over. The scene has shifted to Florida and New Orleans.

Racing in the North has completed its greatest year.

In New York, New England, Maryland and Chicago they began breaking all mutual play records in the young spring season, and they have been smashing all past records ever since. At the New York tracks alone, the mutual play has gone well beyond the $250,000,000 mark with an average around $1,500,000 a day.

BETTER DRESSMAKING

By Ruth Wyck Spears

MANY women are learning to sew as a conservation measure. It is a way to make spare minutes count. They are finding incidentally that dressmaking is as much fun as any other craft. If one has, or can beg, borrow or buy, a sewing machine, all the other equipment is inexpensive and most of it has other uses as well.

One of the first things that the beginner learns is the importance of pressing. It begins as soon as the first seam is sewn. She may acquire pressing irons for special purposes later, but whatever type of iron serves for the family laundry also does very well for dressmaking. An open-end ironing board that will take the full length of a dress is essential but every home-maker counts that a household must. Her seam pressing board and her pressing cushions are the darlings of her equipment. They also may serve her well on ironing day. It is smooth work with the iron when she tucks them under a shoulder or inside a sleeve.

The sleeve form cushion and the tailors' pressing form are easy to make. The latter is often called a ham cushion because that is the shape of it. The covering should be of heavy muslin or other firmly woven cotton goods. The cover for the sleeve form may be cut by a tight sleeve pattern with all extra fullness taken out. The cushion should be stuffed very tightly. A center core of flat layers of newspaper is sometimes used for the large cushion. Cotton or small bits of clean rags may be used for the rest of the stuffing.

NOTE—This drawing is from Mrs. Spears' latest book, BETTER DRESSMAKING. The beginner may learn to sew from this profusely illustrated book; and the experienced dressmaker will find it a useful reference book on modern sewing techniques. Readers wishing to see a copy of BETTER DRESSMAKING should send name and address for complete description and special offer. Address: Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, N. Y.

Efficiency

"The secret of efficiency and success in our enterprises is to act at once upon our ideas while our fancy is still warm and in a glow."

'Do Your Best and End Will Take Care of Itself'

There's a bit of impressive sentiment in this homely thought of Abe Lincoln's:

"If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how—the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, 10 angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

Unique Family

A unique American family is that of the Irish Horse Traders whose 4,000 members, all related by blood or by marriage, spend most of their time traveling through the South in small groups trading horses and mules. Their one official address is an undertaking establishment in Atlanta to which they ship their dead and where they meet for a week every April to celebrate marriages and to hold their annual mass funeral.

Congo Eel Isn't

The Congo eel is not from the Congo and is not an eel but a salamander.

Why Not?

The state police were giving examinations for drivers' licenses. Upon returning from the driving test, a middle-aged Negro was questioned about different highway laws.

The questioner asked: "And what is the white line in the middle of the highway for?"

Sam replied promptly: "Fo' bicycles."

His Field

"And did you ever lose yourself in your work?"

"Yes."

"What is your work?"

"Exploring central Africa."

A fellow asked his boss for a raise. He told the boss that he must have one, as several other companies were after him. It wasn't until weeks later that the boss discovered that they were the gas company, the electric company, and a furnishing company.

He Was!

5 WARS

Smith Bros. has served the public since 1847. In that period America has fought five wars. Only during wartime has there ever been any shortage of Smith Bros. Cough Drops. Our production now is war-reduced but we're distributing it fairly to all. Still only 5¢. A nickel checks that tickle!

SMITH BROS. COUGH DROPS

BLACK OR MENTHOL—5¢

The Japs were wrong Let's keep them wrong!

The Japs were wrong.

Cutting off our rubber supply in the Pacific didn't take us out of the war—or even slow us up.

For Government, the Rubber Director, the rubber industry, and the petroleum, chemical, and alcohol industries pooled their patents and ideas, worked together, and accomplished the seemingly impossible.

Today, there is no shadow of a doubt that our planes will continue to fly, our ships to sail, our tanks to roll.

For America now has nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs!

But our tire worries are still here!

The American people saw the new synthetic rubber plants spring up like mushrooms. They heard of large-scale production of synthetic rubber. And they applauded. Unfortunately, they also jumped to the conclusion that they could stop worrying about tires!

It is true that the RUBBER supply crisis is past. But the long-expected TIRE shortage is with us!

"But," you may say, "how can this be when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are being made... when such a tremendous tonnage of rubber products is being turned out, as well as more airplane and truck tires than ever before?"

One reason is that—as the Baruch Committee foresaw—few tires could be manufactured until our synthetic rubber supply was well on the way. This resulted in millions of tires going out of use at a time when there were no replacements. Meanwhile, tires left in service have less mileage in them, and prewar inventories are gone.

Another reason is that our military needs are far greater than anyone anticipated.

Also, the rubber companies are using a lot of their machinery and manpower to turn out life rafts, bullet-sealing fuel tanks, and hundreds of other urgently-needed army and navy products, in addition to tires.

And you should know that half of today's requirements are for large-size, heavy-duty bus, truck, artillery, airplane, and combat tires, requiring much more labor and materials than peacetime products.

Finally, the tire industry, like every industry today, is feeling the manpower shortage, and there just aren't enough hands for the job.

Face up on the table!

These problems will be overcome when our enemies are overcome. Meanwhile, we want to put our cards face up on the table.

We've told you frankly why there is a serious tire shortage. Now we want you, and every other American who owns a set of tires, to know that this country's transportation system can still suffer a serious blow... unless you make it your personal duty to take care of the tires you now own.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the Government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And... most important of all... recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

HOW GOOD ARE PASSENGER CAR TIRES OF SYNTHETIC RUBBER?

It may be a long time before all civilians can get synthetic rubber tires. Meanwhile, if you should be one of the few who do get them, you will want this information:

Synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars are good tires, and will give you satisfactory service if you take care of them.

You should not think of synthetic rubber tires as improved tires... but as emergency tires. And remember that they have not yet had time to prove what they can do.

It is beside the point to theorize on how they would react to the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days. Every patriotic American knows that tire treads... all tire treads... wear out faster at high speeds, and so drives at today's recommended speed of 35 miles an hour.

As time goes on, we will learn more about the effects of under-inflation of rough roads, and of other abuses. They damage all tires. Indications are that they do proportionately more harm to synthetic rubber tires.

Meanwhile, all tires are rationed to you in trust for the nation, and it is your duty to take every possible care of them, to avoid misuse and prevent abuse.

As experience teaches us more and more about synthetic rubber tires, we will pass the information along to you. Meantime, play safe. Be careful!

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

TRUCK AND BUS TIRES ARE A DIFFERENT STORY

Truck and bus tires, being larger and heavier, generate more heat. They are given long, hard usage on all kinds of highways. They are all too frequently overloaded.

Frankly, today's synthetic rubber bus and truck tires will not stand the abuse that prewar tires would stand, especially overloading. Progress is being made daily—but overloading which would have damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic tire.

The Tire Industry is doing its utmost to solve the serious problem of providing the nation's trucks and buses with satisfactory tires in sufficient quantities.

But until this problem is solved, a dangerous threat exists to America's most vital transportation.

Therefore, while treads of present truck and bus tires are immensely important... the carcasses of these tires have a value beyond all price to America, and to America's truck and bus operators!

Unless tires now in use are made to last, these two essential services will almost certainly break down!

These tires... every one of them... must be recapped the instant the tread wears smooth... before any damage is done to the carcass.

They must be recapped not once, but again and again! High speeds must be done away with... especially on hot roads. Overloads must be avoided. Tires must be properly inflated at all times.

The responsibility to take care of these tires... to make them last as long as possible... is a vital necessity! It must be shouldered by all operators, by all drivers, by all garage men!

No American can fail to heed this warning! The situation is so serious that it is recognized in a new tire warranty. But the real job is to conserve all tires now in use!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Don't forget that everyone... the Tire Industry, the Rubber Director, and many others, are working together with all their energy, as they have worked from the beginning, to keep America rolling.

And remember that, while the Japs were wrong... you must help keep them wrong! Take care of the tires you now have!

Motorist Quick to Take Advantage of His Find

A traveler who stopped at a cross-roads garage in the backwoods, asked the attendant for gasoline.

"How'd you like the bombing of Hamburg?" the motorist asked.

"What bombing?" inquired the hillsman.

"Why, you know, the one the papers have been full of..."

"Didn't you know that?" The attendant shifted his chewing tobacco.

"Can't say I did, stranger."

"You didn't know... Look! Roll me out four new tires!"
